First Edition

This series is dedicated to all the good souls of Planet Earth.

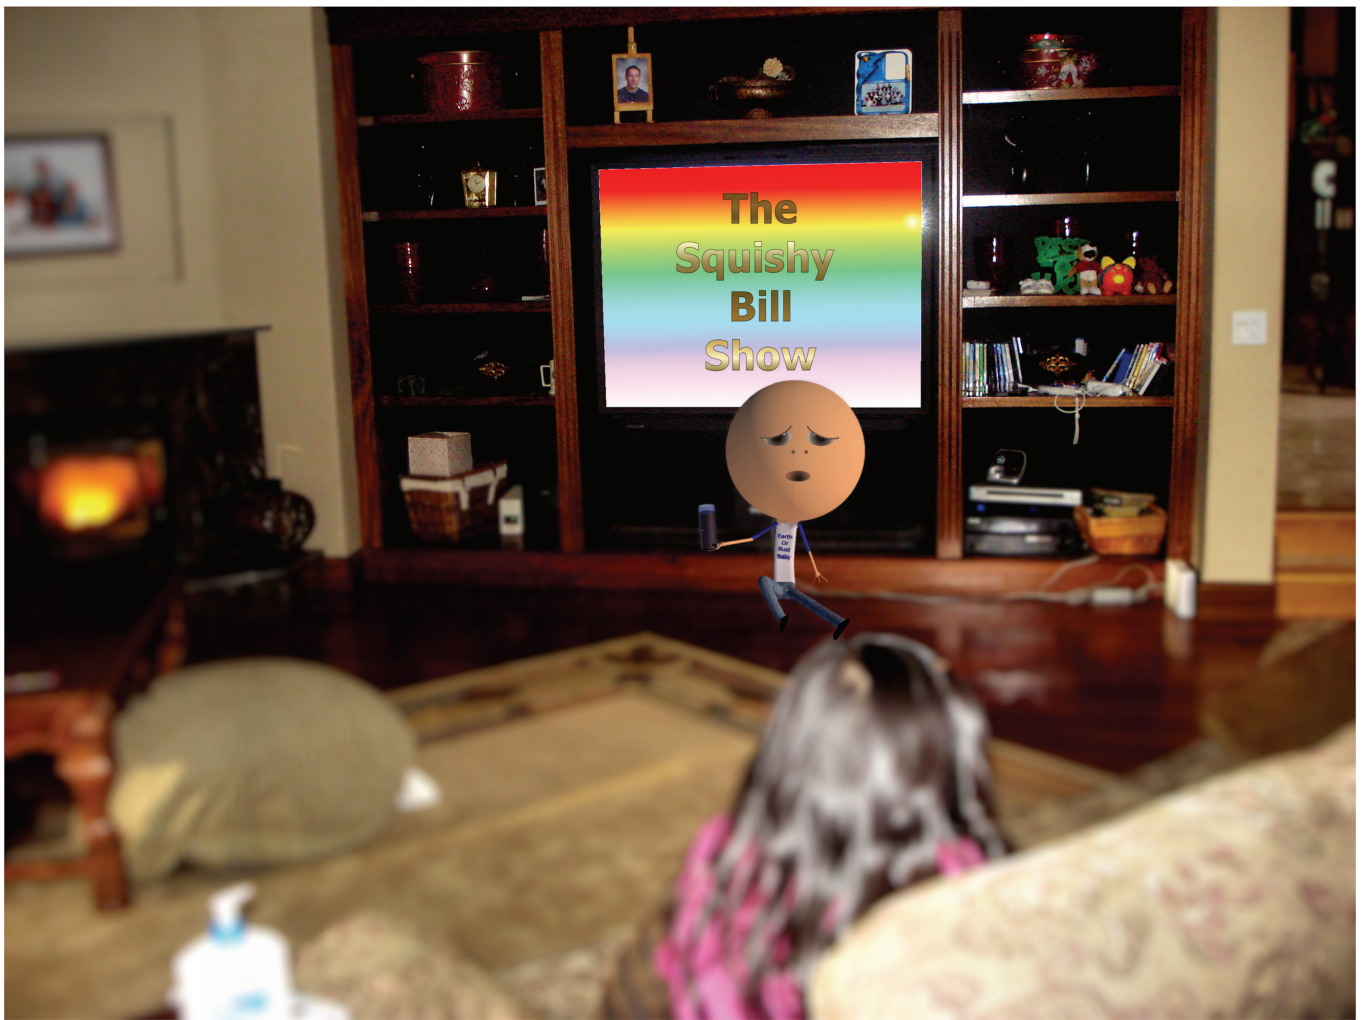

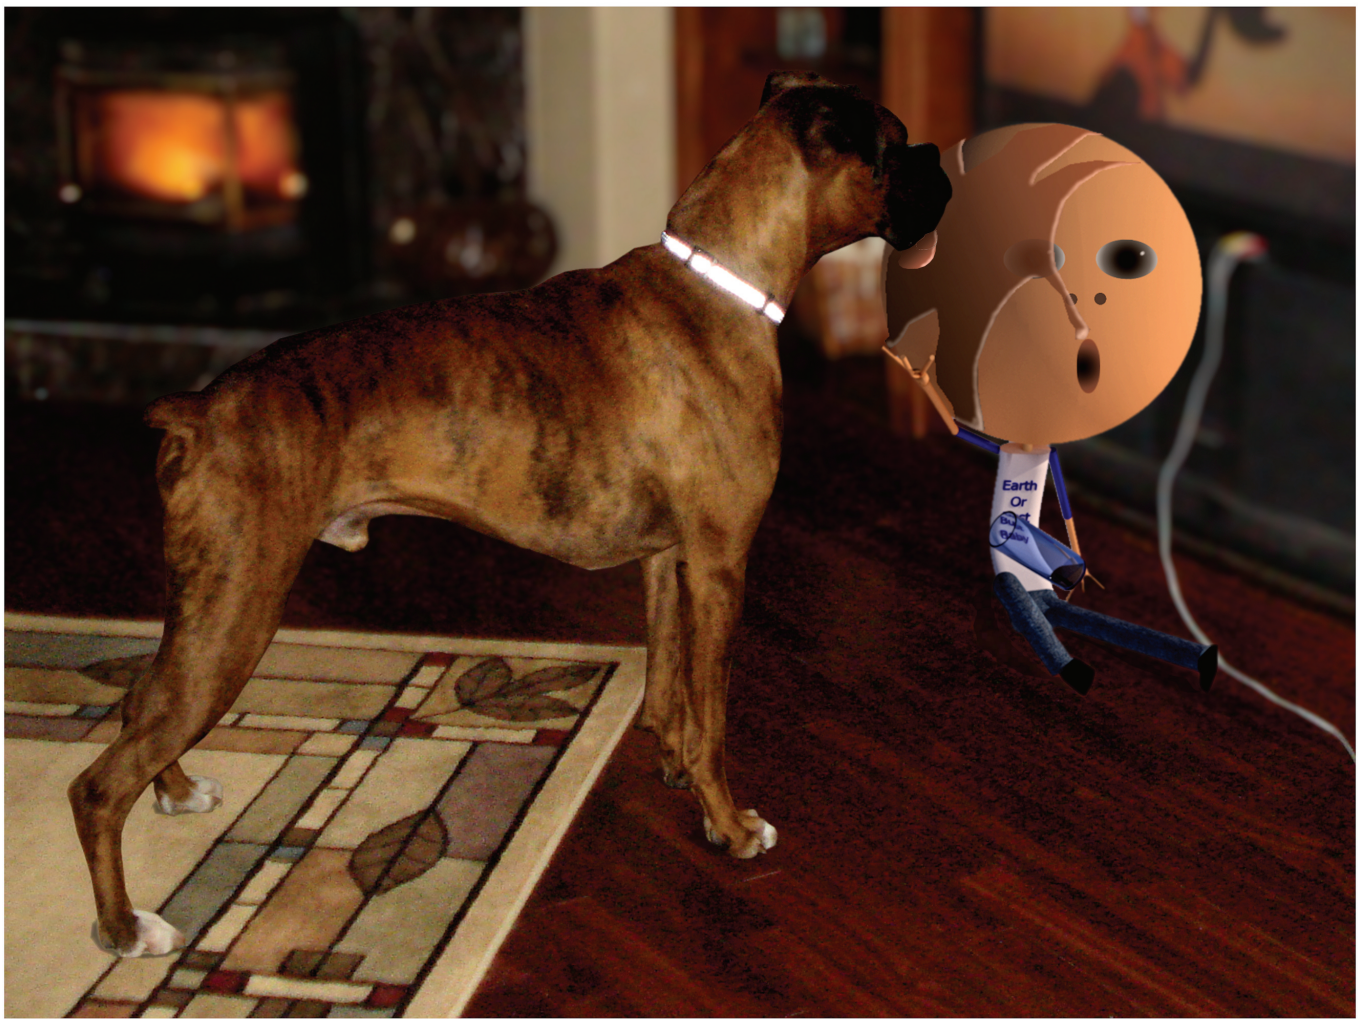

Little E said, "Thanks for the chocolate soy shake Mrs. H. I think I'll watch the Science Fiction channel if nobody else wants to watch something. I can't get enough of those alien shows. They're great comedy!"

Just then Lulu dashed around the corner and yelled, "Look out E!" as she jumped past Little E and onto the couch in the TV room. "I need to watch Squishy Bill and it's about to start!"

Little E fell in front of the TV and Lulu cried, "E, I can't see the TV!" Little E replied, "Whoa, Lulu, you knocked me over." Lulu said, "Sorry, but I can't miss Squishy Bill. I love him and some day I'm going to marry him."

"Well please be more careful. At least I didn't spill the shake," said Little E. Just then Baxter the boxer flipped the glass with his nose and began licking the chocolate shake off of Little E's face.

Lulu's mom said, "Lulu, I have your Halloween costume ready. Do you want to try it on?" Lulu was excited and after putting on her princess costume she asked Little E if he would be her prince for Halloween.

Little E said, "I would love to, Lulu, but how about I be my hero, Abraham Lincoln, instead?"

"He's not a prince. I need a prince. Please be my prince," she asked.

"Well how about Mr. Peanut, then?" asked Little E. "He dresses like a prince. Hey look, I'm running in air!" Lulu couldn't help but laugh.

"Peanut schmeanut," said Lulu. "Mom already made you a prince costume. So will you please, please, please, please, pleeease be my Prince Squishy Bill?" she pleaded.

Surrendering, Little E said, "Fine, I shall be your prince, fair maiden." "Sweet!" declared Lulu and she began applying yellow makeup to Little E's face. Then Little E dressed himself in the prince costume and mask.

When she was finished Little E knelt in front of his princess and Lulu sighed. My oh my, but she had created the prince of princes. He was spectacular. He was regal. He was more than perfect because...

.....he was her Prince Squishy Bill.

Lulu's parents trusted Little E to keep her safe. So off to town they went to go trick or treating with Lulu's friends. Lulu laughed and said, "Mom got your candy pail at a doll store!" E smiled and said, "I'm grateful she thought of me."

Hunter was dressed as Little E with a large paper mache' head. It was so big he had to hold onto it with both hands or he would tip over. It made Lulu laugh. Little E giggled and said, "Gee, you're a good looking rascal."

They met with the twins, Adam and Trinity. Then they went to many houses and filled their baskets with all types of candy. At one house the lady was dressed like a clown. They yelled, "Trick or treat!"

The clown laughed at the sight, then knocked on Hunter's head and asked him what he was. Hunter proudly said, "I'm an alien and my dad and mom helped me make the costume."

"You must have great parents," said the clown. Then she laughed again and asked, "And This Little fellow with the other big head, he must be an alien prince?" All the friends giggled and said, "You could say that."

On the way home, two bigger kids stopped the friends and demanded their candy. Both were mean, teasing and threatening the group. The children were very scared and didn't know what to do.

Little E stepped forward and held out his basket. He said, "Here, enjoy it." The big kid laughed and said, "Where did you get that tiny thing; a doll store?" Then the two demanded everybody's candy, but Little E said, "No. You don't get theirs."

With that, the smaller boy clinched his fist. Both kids began walking toward the children and Little E. The big one said, "How are you going to stop us from taking it, shrimp?"

Little E put his hand up and said, "Stop. I don't want to scare you." The bullies laughed at that thought and kept coming. The children almost ran, but to their surprise, both bullies suddenly turned and ran away, screaming in terror.

You see, the bullies suddenly saw Lulu as a snarling wolf. Hunter appeared to be a floating, evil Jack-O-Lantern and Adam became a living skeleton. The bullies were so scared they ran clear out of the book! They were NEVER bullies again.

Little E turned to the children and said, "Oops, I didn't mean to scare them that badly. I guess I made it seem a little too real. Is everybody ok?"

Lulu walked over to Little E and pulled his hat and mask off. She wiped his make-up off and said, "You're the real prince, E, and this has been the best Halloween ever." She gave him a big hug and said, "And you're the best friend ever."
